THE IRONWORKERS

Across the United States and Canada many of the buildings and structures you see were built by the Ironworkers. Did you know that the Golden Gate Bridge was built by Ironworkers? Ironworkers also built the St. Louis Arch, the CN Tower in Toronto, and Freedom Tower in New York City.

The construction of nearly every structure you can think of—schools, sports stadiums, shopping malls, hospitals, bridges, power plants, office and industrial buildings—all require the skills of trained Ironworkers. By becoming an Ironworker you will have the opportunity to help build the landmarks and shape the skylines of the future. You will be able to look back at your work and say, “I built that!”

Ironworkers begin their careers as apprentices. As an apprentice, you develop the required job skills in a structured, coordinated work and school training program. An apprenticeship program allows you to earn while you learn—meaning you are going to school and working at the same time. You may also earn college credits and work on your associate’s degree as part of your apprenticeship program.

This Directory of Ironworker Training Facilities includes the contact information for approximately 150 training centers in the U.S. and Canada. We are confident that you will find this Directory informative and useful as you learn more about the Ironworkers and our comprehensive training and education system.

As you review the contents in this Directory, you will see that we have a strong network of training centers to meet the training and education needs of families and local communities as well as the skilled worker needs of our contractors.

Within this Directory

you will find a great deal of important information including:

- Contact information for our training centers located throughout the U.S. and Canada.
- Photographs of our training centers.
- Information on our training courses and materials.
- Description of how an apprentice can earn college credits and a degree while completing his or her apprenticeship program.

If you are interested in becoming an Ironworker, or if you are a guidance counselor, teacher, or a technology education instructor—then this Directory will help you locate the Ironworker training center nearest to you.

If you are a parent and are interested in your son or daughter having a quality education, getting a skilled job, and earning college credit—then this Directory will be of interest to you.

If you are a contractor interested in having a skilled workforce to help you complete projects safely and on time—then this Directory will help you locate the Ironworkers in your area.

For more information about the Ironworkers, visit our website at www.ironworkers.org. You can also call 866-553-4766 and more information will be sent to you.

REGIONAL TRAINING CENTERS

In order to meet the ongoing training needs of our local instructors, the Ironworkers operate four Regional Training Centers. These are located in St. Louis, Missouri; Benicia, California; Springfield, New Jersey; and Toronto, Ontario. Throughout the year, a variety of courses for journeyman Ironworkers are offered at these four training centers.

IRONWORKER TRAINING COURSES

Each local apprenticeship program has a curriculum to meet the needs of their apprentices, journeymen, and employers. This curriculum includes a number of courses—most of which also have a hands-on or shop component. The program also includes an on-the-job training component so that apprentices “earn while they learn”.

Here is a list of the courses that may be included in a local’s curriculum:

- Orientation for New Ironworkers
- Introduction to Blueprint Reading
- Welding
- Rigging
- Cranes
- Structural Steel Erection
- Reinforcing Concrete
- Architectural & Ornamental Construction
- 10-hour OSHA Training
- Scaffold User – Erector/Dismantler
- OSHA sub-part R
- First Aid/CPR
- Metal Building Systems
- Post-tensioned Reinforcing Systems
- Mathematics for Ironworkers
- History of the Ironworkers Union
- Hazardous Material Training
- Lead Hazard Training for Ironworkers
- Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) Training for Ironworkers
- Disaster Response Training for Ironworkers
- Precast Safety and Erection
- Fork Lift
- OSHA 30-hour Safety Course
- Foreman Training for Ironworkers

IRONWORKER TRAINING MATERIALS

The Ironworkers use

state-of-the-art training materials to support courses taught in local apprenticeship programs.

The training package for each course is designed for use by both the Ironworker instructor and student. Each training package contains four or five primary components that the instructor and apprentices will use during classroom and shop sessions. The components of a training package include:

REFERENCE MANUAL

INSTRUCTOR GUIDE

STUDENT WORKBOOK

INSTRUCTOR DVD

Reference Manual – The reference manual is the heart of the training package and contains all of the content or information the Ironworker student needs to learn during the course. To support the content presented in the reference manual there are photographs, drawings, safety tips, and other information.

Instructor Guide – This guide is designed for use only by the course instructor. The guide contains general and specific information and suggestions on how to teach the course using the package. Also included in this guide are the tests and the answers to both the assignment sheets (in the student workbook) and to the tests.

Student Workbook – The Ironworker student will use this workbook before and during classroom and shop sessions throughout the course. The workbook contains assignment sheets for each of the units of instruction in the reference manual. These can be used as homework or may be used as classroom activities for individuals or small groups of students. The answers to the assignment sheets are in the instructor guide. The workbook may also contain job sheets that are used by both the instructor and student to learn hands-on skills.

Drawings – Some technical course training packages include a set of drawings. These drawings support the content in the reference manual and may be used during classroom presentations, completion of assignment sheets and/or job sheets and when taking tests.

Instructor DVD – The DVD is designed for use by the instructor before and during each course session. The DVD contains presentations (each containing a number of slides) for each unit of instruction that are designed to be projected by a computer on to a screen in the classroom. In addition to text slides supporting the content in the reference manual, these presentations may also include video segments of key skills and Internet links that will take the user to websites of companies and organizations related to the content being presented. The DVD may also include drawings and other supplemental materials that the instructor can use during classroom presentations.

ASSOCIATE'S DEGREE PROGRAM

Ironworker apprentices in Indiana have been graduating from their apprenticeship programs with associate degrees for a number of years. The Ironworkers have an agreement with Ivy Tech Community College of Indiana making it possible for apprentices across the US and Canada to obtain their Associate of Applied Science degree (AAS).

Apprentices are able to enroll with Ivy Tech Community College of Indiana and receive college credit for their apprenticeship courses. While completing their apprenticeship program, apprentices can go online to complete required courses. Upon completion of these courses and their apprenticeship program, apprentices will receive their associate's degree. This degree program is designed so that students can complete their degree and never leave their home town.

For more information on the Ivy Tech Community College of Indiana degree program, go to www.ironworkers.org and click on "Training" and then "College Credits" to download a copy of the program brochure.
